In the Italian language, as in Latin, we do not make use of any personal pronouns before verbs, except when two or three different persons are expressed by the same word ; – as the subject of the third person both of the singular and plural, may be a man, or a woman, two men, or two women, it admits very frequently of the pronoun, when there is no antecedent which points clearly to the subject.

Thou hadst heard, ave visent-ito. They should believe, cred-erebbero. V, in Italian, is pronounced as in English.
