On the other hand, the remaining three projects are located more in the field of attempting to influence the development interventions that are occurring, mostly by interacting with the state and its policy development arms. Few women, she continues, considered that their problems would be resolved through separating their interests from those of their husbands or families. As such, the multi-methodologies chosen resisted a binary view of the local and the global, and instead sought to reveal their interconnections. To feel the healing power of being challenged in my views and my biases and to let Endeley has argued that the pipeline project was masculine in nature and therefore, its impacts were gendered, with women being the most negatively affected. The literature on globalisation also has gaps and silences. Person A makes claim X.
